BAIL NOT REDUCED IN ABANDONED BABY CASE.

The Magistrate Refuses Request of Hammond and Miss Brown's Counsel.

HEARING FIXED FOR MAY 15.

THE WOMAN FINDS BONDSMAN WHILE THE MAN WAITS.

Miss Brown Has Been Away From Home All Winter, and Was Thought to be in Philadelphia Engaged in Business.

William F. Hammond, the jeweler of Greenport, L. I., and Miss Caroline R. Brown, of the same place, who were arrested yesterday charged with abandoning a three-months'-old baby, which Hammond claimed he found in the West Twenty-third Street Ferry house, were held in $1,000 bail each pending an examination before Magistrate Meade in the Jefferson Market Police Court, Manhattan, this morning. Hammond and Miss Brown, who is the daughter of a well-to-do hardware merchant in Greenport, were arrested by Detectives Reidy and Armstrong, of the Central Office, and brought to Manhattan last night.

Miss Brown was accompanied by her father, Orrin F. Brown, who is nearly 80 years old, and Judge Benjamin Reeves, of County Court of Suffolk County, a life-long friend of the Brown family, besides the detectives, who had Hammond in charge.

On the arrival of the party at the Thirty-fourth Street Ferry they were taken to Police Headquarters in hacks, where Capt. McClusky took Hammond and Miss Brown into his office and questioned them. No information was given out as to what was said in Capt. McClusky's room.

In the meanwhile Judge Reeves telegraphed for former Assistant District Attorney D. Welch, who was retained as counsel for both the prisoners. Mr. Brown and Judge Reeves next went in search of a bondsman, but it was not until 9:30 o'clock when they obtained Grant L. Nickols, a builder, who furnished the $1,000 bond in order to release Miss Brown. Hammond spent the night at Police Headquarters, while Miss Brown, her father, and Judge Reeve went to the Hotel St. Denis.

Miss Brown was cool and self-possessed when she arrived at the Jefferson Market Court. She was accompanied by her father and Judge Reeves. She was dressed in a black silk skirt, light waist and gray coat. She wore a soft felt hat with white band. Hammond looked as if he had had a restless night. His complexion was sallow and he looked a trifle nervous. To the Court Clerk the woman said her name was Caroline R. Brown, that she was born in Greenport and that she was 30 years old and had no particular occupation. Hammond next gave his pedigree and then both signed their names to the documents.

When their case was called, both stepped before Magistrate Meade cool and self-possessed. Former Assistant District Attorney Welch appeared for his clients. He spoke as follows:

"Your Honor, in this case I think the bail has been excessive. Miss Brown was bailed last night while Hammond was not. Regarding the case I wish to say that with all due respect to the energies of the newspapers they have made a mountain out of a molehill. Mr. Hammond is innocent of this charge of attempting to abandon this child. Miss Brown is also innocent. Mr. Hammond is one of the most respected citizens of Greenport, where he has lived for more than forty years. Miss Brown is a woman of unblemished reputation, and is respected by all in the community in which she resides. This case is magnified, yes, intensely magnified, to satisfy the public, who have a craving for news. I have not had an opportunity of consulting with my clients, and I ask for a reduction of bail in both Miss Brown and Mr. Hammond's case. I ask also that your Honor will adjourn the case for one week, and I will then prove that no crime has been committed. They are strangers in this community and I again ask for a reduction of bail."

Magistrate Meade stated that cases of this class in Magistrates' courts demand that the bail bond be not less than $1,000. He then cited from the Penal Code and put the case down for next Friday for examination. Counsel Welch and Judge Reeves held a consultation and then the former asked the Magistrate to name another day for the examination of his clients. The court then set May 15 for the day of examination and held both Miss Brown and Hammond in $1,000 bail each.

Miss Brown's bondsman again signed her bail bond, while Hammond was taken away and placed in a private room until he should be bailed or taken to headquarters.

Miss Brown and her father and Judge Reeves left the court room together. A curious crowd watched her as she walked away leaning on the arm of her father.

A morning paper states that when Hammond was arrested he said that the child which he left at the asylum for Foundlings was Miss Brown's. Detective Reidy stated to-day that Hammond never made such a statement.

A despatch from Wilmington, Del., states that an entry of February 3, in the register of the maternity department of the Homeopathic Hospital is the name Wilbur Francis Harlansworth. These are the initials of Hammond.

In court neither Miss Brown nor Hammond would make statements.

GREENPORT, April 28.—The arrivals of Detectives Reidy and Armstrong with Cabman Thomas McDonald, and the arrest of W. F. Hammond and Miss Carrie Brown has caused a great sensation here, and nothing but "the baby case" is to be heard. The arrest of Mr. Hammond was accomplished first. He was at his jewelry store, and said he was expecting some one from New York would come down after him to identify "the woman in green." Detective Armstrong remained at the store with him, while Reidy and McDonnald were driven up to the Brown residence. There was some objection to admitting the men to see Miss Brown, and Deputy Sheriff Elias P. Jennings was summoned to overcome it. Miss Brown was assisting her mother in the preparation of dinner. Her father had not arrived from his business. As soon as McDonnald saw Miss Brown, he positively identified her as "the woman in green" who rode with Hammond in his cab. She was immediately placed under arrest.

Until shortly before train time Miss Brown was allowed to remain at her home. County Judge Benjamin H. Reeve was immediately retained as counsel for Mr. Hammond and Miss Brown, and, with Mr. Brown, accompanied them to New York, on the 3:20 train. The Brown family is highly respected here, and great sympathy is expressed for the parents, who are old people, Mr. Brown being about 80. He is one of the oldest business men in the place, and of remarkably upright Christian character. Mrs. Brown says she believes her daughter is innocent of any wrong doing in the matter. Mrs. Hammond believes that the story told by her husband is true, and that he picked up the child at the Twenty-third street ferry as he says. During his absence yesterday she took charge of his business.

The charges contained in some of the papers last night, that Miss Brown was known at Wilmington, Del., as the wife of a New York jeweler, and had been there all last winter, and became a mother, is a great surprise to this community. It was supposed that she was in Philadelphia as the agent of a book publishing house. So, when she came home this spring, it was because business was dull and she had been laid off for a while.

TROOP C HOME AGAIN.

Ride of Over Forty Miles in Record-Breaking Time.

The sixty-eight members of Troop C, including officers, who were left on duty with a provisional troop of Squadron A, at Croton Dam, when the main body of the armed forces of the State that had been guarding the dam was relieved, on Tuesday last, arrived at the North Portland Avenue Armory at 4 P. M. yesterday, after a ride of less than 10 hours, including stops.

Reveille was sounded in Camp DeBevoise, on the down-stream side of the dam, at 2:30 A. M. yesterday. At 4 o'clock breakfast was served to the troop, and a half-hour later horses were saddled and officers and men were on the march to Brooklyn. A stop was made on the outskirts of Yonkers for lunch and there the troopers and their horses enjoyed a couple of hours rest.

One of the leading horses attached to the big supply wagon, driven by Trooper James McCue, dropped dead from heart disease about a mile this side of the dam. It was a hired horse, and a troop horse had to be substituted. Otherwise the troop reached home in excellent shape and in record breaking time. The Manhattan troop was left far in the rear, and was lost to sight after Troop C left the camp.

There were few people at the armory when the troop arrived, as Capt. DeBevoise and his men were not expected for an hour or two later. The troop has made an enviable record for itself during the strike, and one of which every officer and enlisted man may well feel proud.

DIVORCE JURY DISCHARGED.

After Deliberating for Hours in Glassford Suit They Couldn't Agree.

The Jury in the divorce suit of Henry Glassford against Isabel F. Glassford, after more than ten hours of deliberation yesterday, were unable to agree upon a verdict. It was stated to-day that at first the Jury stood seven to five for the plaintiff and at the close ten to two. Lawyer Field, counsel for the plaintiff, will have the case tried again.

The parties involved in the suit were married on July 15, 1867, and have six children. The allegations of the plaintiff were that his wife had had intimate relations with William H. Haywood, Franklin H. Eberle and James Higgins, a park policeman. These were all denied by the defendant.

FOUGHT WITH A TROLLEY CAR.

Alfred Fickert Lost Two Teeth During the Encounter.

Alfred Fickert, 38 years old, of 191 Stockholm street, had a rough-and-tumble fight with a trolley car last night in Grand street. The car succeeded in throwing Mr. Fickert to the ground, and knocking out two of his teeth. Then Mr. Fickert was locked up by an unfeeling policeman attached to the Bedford Avenue Station. A charge of intoxication was made against him.

Fickert was arraigned in the Lee Avenue Court this morning, and while trying to explain to Magistrate Kramer that he was not guilty of the charge said: "I had a pretty lively experience last night."

The Magistrate was of the same opinion.

Fickert showed the Magistrate two teeth and remarked: "They are my teeth. They were knocked out of my mouth by a trolley car. Yesterday I went to Newark on business, and when I returned to Brooklyn I encountered a trolley car in Grand street."

The policeman said that Fickert was under the influence of liquor, and Magistrate Kramer imposed a fine of $1.

JOSEPH MOODY HELD.

Had Pawntickets for Stolen Property When Arrested.

Joseph Moody, who lives at 222 Berry street with his wife and five small children, was held in $100 bail this morning by Magistrate Kramer in the Lee Avenue Police Court on a charge of larceny. The complainant was Mrs. Charlotte Smith, of the same address. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Smith called at the Bedford Avenue Police Station and said that her apartments had been robbed of some pillow cases, sheets and a silk skirt. Detectives O'Connor and Collins were placed on the case, and at 10 o'clock arrested Moody. The prisoner was slightly under the influence of liquor.

When arraigned in court, Moody said that he had no recollection of entering the woman's apartments. A pawn ticket for a silk skirt was found in his possession. He had no recollection either, of how he secured possession of it.

Drove on Sidewalk at Cost of $2.

Tony Schriever, of East New York and Kingston avenues, yesterday afternoon amused himself by driving a horse and wagon along the sidewalk at Nostrand avenue and East Broadway. Policeman Fraser, of the Grant Street Station, witnessed the act and promptly gathered the offender in. It cost him $2.

OVER 40,000 STUDENTS FOREIGN MISSIONARIES.

Colleges Have That Number of Representatives Hard at Work in Distant Lands.

1,500 WENT OUT LAST YEAR.

AND THERE ARE THOUSANDS READY TO GO ANY TIME.

Ecumenical Conference Discusses Student Volunteer Movement's Achievements Since its Inception—Many Young People Present.

The progress of the students' volunteer movement, which has made such an impetus in foreign mission work in the past few years, and of other similar organizations, was outlined and highly lauded at this morning's session of the Ecumenical Conference, in Carnegie Hall, Manhattan. The general topic of the day's three sessions, 'Students and Other Young People," was given such a prominent place on the programme, because of the great advances which the students have made in foreign fields and of the large numbers which have entered into missionary life within the past year. Young people were present in goodly numbers this morning.

Prof. J. Ross Stevenson, Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Students' Volunteer Movement in the United States, and a member of the General Executive Committee, was the first speaker. He discussed "The Achievements, Present Position and Significance of Missionary Movements Among Students Throughout the World." He declared that last year 1,500 student volunteers went out to foreign fields, 305 classes were organized and the total enrolment was 4,200. There are now a large number of volunteers ready to be sent out and the waiting fields have done much to encourage home churches to do their best.

"There are more intending missionaries to-day than there ever have been," he said. Missionaries have been the want of reformed Christendom up to this generation. Now there are ten offers for services in the foreign field where there were but one before the movement began. There is thus a larger number to choose from and the standard can be raised. We are sending out better missionaries, as a class, each year. This great student uprising is a challenge to the church of God. It has prayer for the coming of the kingdom of God. If all of the volunteers could be sent out, the kingdom would be hastened by many years."

H. C. Duncan, M. A., Chairman of the Student Volunteer Missionary Union, of Great Britain, stated that in that country 2,000 students are now enrolled, 720 new names have been received during the past year and of the latter number 566 have reached the foreign field. The announcement that over fifty per cent of the graduates of the colleges in Great Britain in the past year have offered their services for mission work evoked prolonged applause.

The Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D., President of Union Theological Seminary, spoke upon "The Young Men of the Future Ministry. How Fire Them With the Missionary Passion and Make Them Leaders of Missionary Churches." He said:

"According to the New Testament standard, the passion of a Christlike love for human lives is a greater thing than eloquence, knowledge, or faith. 'If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal. And if I have the gift of prophecy and know all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have faith so as to remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing.' 'The passion of a Christlike love for human lives develops in the soul of a Christian disciple from the presence in himself of powers and activities that reflect the mind of Christ. These are clear vision of the world, deep feeling toward the world, actual effort for the world.

"Our Lord saw all human life clearly. He saw the world as it is. No mists of optimism deceived Him—no veils of pessimism blinded Him. While taking note of every local interest, while loving and toiling for the individual, yet ever with clear eyes, He saw the world, loved of God, cursed by sin, groaning and travailing for redemption.

"And with this clear vision of all human life, our Lord joined the deep feelings of perfect appreciation and divine compassion. What He saw He felt. Upon His own holy soul He bore the griefs and carried the sorrows of humanity. The sighing of the prisoner came up before Him, and the cry of the oppressed was in His ears. When He beheld the city He wept over it. He had compassion on the multitude, because they were as sheep without a shepherd. With unwavering faith, He turned toward Jerusalem that He might be lifted up and draw all unto Himself. The question now under discussion: How shall we fire the young men of the future ministry with the missionary passion is already in process of solution, and it is not impossible to show the main lines along which that solution is destined to advance.

"The study of missions is slowly rising to the rank of theological discipline. That it has not done so sooner is not altogether so strange as at first appears. The literature of missions is comparatively a modern literature, and recognition of its importance has not been unduly delayed. The church is making her modern evangelistic history so rapidly and abundantly that it is but time to begin to feel the thrilling effects of that history reacting upon the divinity school. At many points that most salutary reaction is taking place and the study of missions is finding its appropriate rank and proportion, while the opulent and splendid literature of missions is pouring into the library. It will soon be impossible in all the divinity schools that seek to keep pace with the times for a man to pass through his course of training without having the worldwide point of view, without seeing the worldwide vision unless he rejects it for himself and shuts his eyes against it. The contact of living missionary workers with the divinity school life shall become frequent and intimate. The realism of missions shall demonstrate itself to many who once had but a speculative interest therein. The philosophical aspects of missions shall appear in the light of the modern literature, and the whole subject of missions in its largest and noblest relations shall take its place in the curriculum beside the study of ancient languages, of church history, of the doctrines of faith.

"But the study of missions as a discipline of the divinity school cannot by itself bring to pass that setting on fire of the future ministry with the missionary passion.

"I see other forces at work which make for that glorious end.

"I see developing at many points a new conception of the ministry; it must attract toward it many of the most gifted and consecrated of our young men. The college and the seminary are drawing closer together. The study of missions in the colleges is bringing out a type of manhood which is full of heroic beauty, enthusiasm, and faith. The undergraduate is studying the world to-day as never before, is feeling in his fresh young heart the thrill of the new conceptions of applied Christianity, is realizing Christ's love and Christ's present salvation for the world in terms of reality. And in many a college to-day are found the very flower of our youth to whom the ministry appears not as a reserved and gloomy world of ecclesiastical technicalities, but as the King's own highway to joyful and abundant service.

"I see a spirit developing among our young men that portends a vast accession of missionary enthusiasm for the ministry of the future. The Lord Jesus Christ is manifesting Himself in His absolute Godhood, in His availing atonement, in His enlightening word, to a great company of our most educated and most gifted youths. Personal consecration for personal service is a conception of living that grows more and more attractive to a multitude of our finest minds. And out of this class of minds shall be gathered the ministry of the future. It shall be a ministry devoted to the highest scholarship, and the most fearless search for truth, looking upon the culture of the mind as no foe to the spirituality of life.

"It shall be a Christ-filled ministry beholding the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, worshipping Him with the enthusiasm of an absolutely fearless affection and presenting Him the only name given under heaven whereby man must be saved.

"It shall be a Biblical ministry, holding fast the faithful Word and preaching that Word as the one great sufficient message and revelation of God to man. It shall be a missionary ministry, full of passion to redeem clear-eyed and to discover the ongoing of Christ's work. Faithful in its stewardship at home and abroad, apostolic in its eagerness to spread far and wide the Gospel of the Risen and Ascended Lord; apostolic in its blessed hope that that unseen and crowned Saviour shall surely come again."

F. M. Gilbert, of Brooklyn, spoke of the movement at Yale University. He said it would be difficult to compare now the condition of Yale with that before the movement began. Missionary meetings are held regularly. There is a big missionary library, containing over 200 volumes besides those in the theological library, and they are widely read, twenty-seven men are studying a regular and scientific course on missions. The money raised by contributions has been sufficient to defray the expenses of a missionary representative of Yale on the foreign field. Young men from several other colleges were heard.

Programme for To-night.

There will be three speakers at to-night's session. The Rev. W. F. McDowell, D. D., ex-Chancellor of the University of Denver, will talk on "The Solemn Responsibility of the Church in the Light of the Working of God's Spirit Among the Students and Other Young People."

NAVY YARD NEWS.

Administration Building is Rapidly Being Completed.

Building No. 27, the Administration Building, to be used as the office of the steam engineering department, is rapidly nearing completion. The iron so long delayed has arrived, and the roof and general framework is now completed. The furnishing will soon begin. Chief J. A. B. Smith expects to be installed in his new quarters some time in July or August.

The reason assigned for the departure of the battleship Indiana from the Navy Yard for League Island is that there is fresh water in the latter place. Salt water is especially bad for steel ships, hence the change. Capt. Dickens expects to sail 8:30 Monday morning.

The torpedo boat Porter will probably be at the Navy Yard for a week or more. She is on her way to the Newport torpedo station, where her crew will be exercised in torpedo warfare during the coming summer.

The Navy Yard band gave a very successful concert on the Vermont last night. Commandant Philip intends to make these Friday night concerts a regular feature hereafter.

Probably the One That Escaped From the Centennial.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 28.—Bernard Hance, of Hickory Corners, shot a bald eagle yesterday. The bird measured seven feet and eight inches from tip to tip. The eagle when shot had just dropped upon a sheep in Hance's barnyard. On one of its legs was a silver tag, to which was engraved "P. Z. G., July 4, 1876," and it is supposed the bird escaped from the Zoological Gardens during the Centennial Exposition.
